Truth and Beauty is an endearing, wonderfully written memoir about the friendship and love between Ann Patchett and her friend, memoirist/poet, Lucy Grealy. Complete opposites, Patchett aptly compares their relationship to Aesop's fable characters: the grasshopper, ant, tortoise and hare. "What the story didn't tell you is that the ant relented at the eleventh hour and took in the grasshopper ...

Keats closes the poem with the chiasmus: "Beauty is truth, truth beauty, —that is all / Ye know on earth, and all ye need to know". It is not clear if this phrase is said by the urn or by the poet. But in any case, facing the object itself, the poet is not talking about its visual value - of its form or its colors - but the fact that it transcends time and is capable of seeing ...

Truth is the first thing to be sought for, and Beauty and Goodness will then be added unto you. Jesus was, to my mind, a supreme artist because he saw and expressed Truth; and so was Muhammad, the Koran being, the most perfect composition in all Arabic literature - at any rate, that is what scholars say. It is because both of them strove first for Truth that the grace of expression naturally ...

Truth & Beauty - About

'Beauty is truth, truth beauty' has precisely the same status, and the same justification as Shakespeare's 'Ripeness is all.' It is a speech 'in character' and supported by a dramatic context. To conclude thus may seem to weight the principle of dramatic propriety with more than it can bear. This would not be fair to the complexity of the problem of truth in art nor fair to Keats's little ...

Truth & Beauty — ANN PATCHETT

There is so, so much going on here—whole papers on death, obscurity, connection, the nature of truth and beauty.....I could ponder and write about this one for days. However, this poem very obviously would like to have a conversation with John Keats's "Ode on a Grecian Urn," so I'm going to leave them alone to talk it out. Thou still unravish'd bride of quietness,
Thou foster-child
